Love a cruel tyrant is: Slays his victims with a glance, Straight recovers with a kiss, But to slay again, perchance.

Wouldst thou know where Love doth bide?

Interesting Xmas Gift. The Charlottesville Progress of Satur-

The Charlottesvillo Progress of Saturday 8ays:
There went from this city to-day as a Christmas gift from the Misses Doswell, of the University of Virginia, to Judke George L. Christman, of Richmond, a picture which will prove of peculiar interest to that distinguished soldier of the South

The frame is about two feet square, and the center is occupied by a picture of the Confederate flag, with the story of the Confederate note—"Representing nothing on God's earth now"—printed at the sides, Treasury, and Virginia notes of the Confederacy, illustrating the lament, are disposed at various places, and the whole is vignetted with portraits of President Davis and four Confederate chieftinia—Lee, Jackson, Beauregard and Joseph E. Johnston, Fort Moultrie, the Virginia ramming the Cumberland, and the shields of Virginia and South Carolina have, appropriately, places in this place, whielf commemorates a heroic period in the history of the people of the South.

The engagement is reported of Miss Marie Russell, youngest daughter of Judge and Mrs. Horace Russell, of New York, to George Weston, Jr. Like her elder sister, Miss Eleanor Russell, whose marriage to L. Graeme Scott, of the English diplomatic service, takes place on January 3d, at the Church of the Incarnation, she is a granddaughter of the late Judge Henry Hilton, Judge and Mrs. Russell gave a dinner on Saturday evening for the bridesmaids and ushers who are to take part in the wedding on January 3d.

Count Fritz Hochberg, whose engagement to the Hon. Caroline Burke Roche, sistor-in-law of Mrs. Burke Roche, of New York, has just been announced, is a younger brother of Count Corrad, of the same name, who was here last spring and in the aummer. His elder brother is that Prince Honry of Pless who married Miss Mary Cornwallis West. The Hon. Caroline Burke Roche is a sister of the present Lord Fermoy and a popular figure in English and Continental society.

Opening of Flowerland.

"Floworland." the brilliant bazan, under the auspices of the Beth Ababah Auxillary, for which elaborate preparations have been made, opened auspiciously and brilliantly last night at the Saveniterh Regiment Armory. The Mayor and the Governor were both present and made addresses commendatory of the enterprise and wishing it a full measure of success. The armory hall is more beautifully decorated than it has ever been before, and wis thronged last night with a brilliant and handsomely gowned throng. The various booths are most artistically decorated with flowers, each having its distinctive blossom, and the young ladles in charge are clad in costumes distinctive of each department of the onterprise. The bazaar is on a larger seale than any entertainment undertaken for several seasons, and promises to be one of the most successful entertainments of the kind ever held in this city.

SPIENCER, N. C., Dec. 26.—A collision between two locomotives occurred here yesterday afternoon in which two eigines were hadly torn up and Engineer D. A. Beaver, of Salisbury, was severely injured. Northbound passenger train No. 38, which was running several hours late had just arrived and Engineer Beaver, in charge of engine No. 1209, was preparing to take the train on north and was taking water on a side track. Unexpectedly and without warning, a freight engine, which had been left steamed up and on a dead track on the yards, plunged around a curve and dashed into the rear of the passenger engine at a rate of about thirty miles per hour, practically demolishing the tank and tender of the letter and driving the same up into the engineer's seat and injuring Mr. Beaver about the legs and head. The fremsn jumped off in time to save himself. The pilot, frame and front of the boiler of the oncoming engine was practically wrecked in the tremendous crash though neither engine left the track.

It is believed that some unknown person either purposely or thoughliesly mounted the freight engine on the yards, at a time when they were unobserved and copend the throttle and turned the

GAY OPENING OF THE NEW BIJOU

Playlouse Crowtled at Both Afternoon and Evening Performances.

BILL AN EXCELLENT ONE

Creston Clarke Appears as Monsieur Beaucaire at the Academy.

The new Rijou opened its doors to the public vesterday afternoon and Richmond theatre-goers, of whom there were accommodate, saw as pretty a playhouse ns there is in the South. The opening of a new theatre is always an interesting event and when the initial performance is given on a holiday, it makes it doubly so. There was no hitch attending the opening. Everything was ready, the doors were opened at the usual mutines hour, the ushers handled the crowd speedily, there being no blocking of the alsies and the fifteen hundred scats were all occupied ten minutes before time for the curtain, The orchestra took their places at twenty-five minutes after two o'clock and at 2:35, by Manager Wells's watch, the curtain was rung up for the first time and the initial performance in the new house commenced. Managers Wells and McKee were both back of the railing, and watched with interest and with pardon-

McKee were both back of the railing, and watched with interest and with pardonable pride, the first seene of the place which set the wall rolling.

No better production could have been chosen for the opening of the house, especially as it was the holiday attraction, than "Running for Office." a musical comedy written by George M. Cohan, the most clover of the four players of that name.

No one would have any difficulty in recognizing the piece as the work of Geo. Cohan. The latter can get as many exits and entrances to a minute as any man who turns out productions for the stage. And with Cohan, it is not a question of simply making his characters chase each other across the stage. That is an old trick, but Mr. Cohan so works these quick entrances and exits that each one causes a new complication. The audience is in a roar of laughter during this rapid action of the piece.

Bobby_Harrington makes the hit of the performance. He will be remembered for his excellent work with the "Foxy Grandpa" Company, seen at the Bijou during Horse Show week. Harrington has a regular George Cohan part in this piece and he plays it with all the snap and vim characteristic of the writer of the comedy. His song in the first act won him so many encores that all count of them was lost.

The entire company was excellent and no one will dispute the fact that the chorus girls were the protitiest and liveliest ever seen on that stage. Scriously, however, the chorus kept pace with the others in the cast and that is saying a good deal. No one would have any difficulty in re-

Mr. Clarke's Monsieur Beaucaire.

Mr. Clarke's Monsieur Beaucaire.

Mr. Creston Clarke, once quite a favorite actor with Richmond audiences, appeared at the Academy yesterduy afternoon and evening, presenting "Monsieur Beaucaire," which was last seen here when Richard Mansfield played the title role. The impersonation by Mr. Clarke has in it more of the fiesh and blood than that of Mr. Mansfield, who with all his technical skill as an artist, never lets his audience get through the surface of his frosty exterior. Mr. Mansfield is a great front process of mechanism, a wonderfully continued automaton, with every gesture, every movement and every vibration of the voice in harmony and in perfect accord, yet lacking like one thing to make his portrayals brights in life—a soul. Mr. Mansfield is the greatest living example of mechanical acting. He is like a planola—the music he gives out is faultless in its execution and technique, but there is no soul in it. The Beaucaire of Creston Clarke lacked the smoothness of that of Mansfield, but in place of that he gave an impersonation instinct with life. No two actors ever played the same role without the work of each being compared. Mr. Clarke's Monsieur Beaucaire. role without the work of each being com-pared with that of the other-it is the first thing that the audience does, and naturally it is the first thing the reviewer naturally it is the first thing the reviewer does.

Notwithstanding the old chestnut in regard to comparisons, those who write and those who talk will continue to make comparisons until the end of time. It is only by comparison that one learns. One singer is givine until another songing with a sweeter voice is heard, and then the first is a poor little warbler after all.

Mr. Clarke has not altogether been forgotten by Richmond play-goors, and some may remember that it has not been so many years ago since he starred with Julia Marlowe in his support as leading lady. "The Flaming Arrow." "The , Flaming Arrow."

To-day, matines and night, at the Academy the romantic melodrama. "The Flaming Arrow." will be presented. This play is from the pen of Lincoln J. Carter, that past master in the construction of melodramas and novel effects. In addition to a company which is large and artistically strong he has secured many novelties with which to add realism to the sudations of the play. Among the features are Moon Dog, a famous warrior; Red Flash, Custer's famous Indian secut, and the man who carried Custer's last message. An interesting feature is a genuine Indian brass band, who are graduates of Carlisie and all fine musicions.
